Motor Maker Repudiated Unpatriotic Interview Given by His Vice-President.

Special Desputch to THE SUN. MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich., June 23,-The seginning of the seventh week of the trial of the $1,000,000 libel suit of Henry Ford against the Chicago Tribune was marked to-day by three distinct issues of veracity. One was between P. Whitcomb Williams, a newspaper correspondent, and Frank L. Klingensmith, vice president of the Ford Motor Company. The second between Lieut. Charles A. Teeters and Sergeant Jack Le Febvre of the Detroit Field Artillery raised in 1916 against Lieut. J. A. Connors of the same unit and the third, almost serious, was that between Sergeant Le Lebvre, at present a Lieutenant in the State Constabulary, and Gerald Buckley of the Teeters and Le Febvre were called by the Tribune to meet the testimony of James A. Connors of Detroit, then a Lieutenant, who said he had obtained asburance by telephone from a Ford official two or three days before the Chicago Trioune editorial that men who enlisted for border service would be considered as unavoidably absent, their jobs held for them and their families kept from want during their absence.

Teeters testified that no such announcement as Connors mentioned was made ment as Connors mentioned was made to the organization at any time or was communicated to him. Le Febvre's testimony was much to the same effect, but on cross-examination he was confronted with a paper bearing his signature stating that in June, 1916, Le Febvre was a member of Battery C, acting as sergeant, and that an announcement was made either by Lieut. Connors or other efficer that all members of prospective members of the battery who were samployees of the Ford Motor Company in the event of the battery going into active service would have their jobs back on their return and that their dependents would be loked after.

their return and that their dependents would be loked after.

P. W. Williams, the Tribune's Detroit correspondent, was questioned in detail as to the method of obtaining the information published as a despatch from Detroit in the Chicago Tribune June 22, 1916, under the head, "Flivver Patriotism." It was this despatch which formed the basis of the editorial complained of in the suit.

B. R. T. COLLISION RAISED IN FORD CASE Two Car Train Crashes Into

Two men were seriously hurt and seven other persons slightly injured last night at midnight when a two car train on the Broadway line bound for Canarsie ran into a three car Lexington avenue train near Broadway and Putnam GUARDSMEN AT VARIANCE avenue, Brooklyn. Those who were seriously hurt were the motorman of the train bound for Canarsie and an unidentified man who was a passenger in the Lexington avenue train stopped a few minutes before midnight on the tracks between the Gates avenue and the Halsey street stations while the motorman got off the train to put out a fire which had started on the ties owing to defective insulation. The Broadway train, coming from Chambers street, Manhattan, crashed into the rear car of the Lexington avenue train. The Broadway train was composed of steel cars. The cars of the other train were made of wood.

It is because that particular girl had learned the subtle art of buying wisely. It is a talent that most girls covet, yet not all achieve.

We are ready to be of important assistance to misses who are planning their vacation wardrobes, which should contain clothes appropriate to so many occasions of sport and social recreation.
